Athlete Profile (National)

Orlando Perez – Determination of a Tiger!

Like a tiger, Orlando Perez is poised to seize his target. For him, that target is always competing at his best in the National Veterans Wheelchair Games. At the event, Perez is all business when he arrives for the fierce competition that enfolds during the week. At one event, he carefully pulled on his gloves after adjusting his athlete number on his race chair, the picture of intensity and focus. When another athlete asked about the day's schedule, however, Perez was off at once to get the information. "That's what I'm here for," he said. "To compete as hard as I can and to help my brothers and sisters." That rare combination – intense internal focus and discipline and an almost compulsive interest in helping fellow athletes contributed to Perez's selection as 2005 Spirit of the Games Award winner.

For Perez, the most important thing in his life is family and, for him, the Games are truly a family affair. The father of three, this 33-year-old Augusta, Ga., resident surrounds himself with family at the Games. In past years, his mother has joined him from Puerto Rico, where Perez was raised. An uncle is also a Wheelchair Games competitor, and other family members have been nearby to support and cheer. Also a past participant in the National Disabled Veterans Winter Sports Clinic, family involvement is central to Perez's pursuit of athletic success. "When I compete, I think of my family," he said. "It wouldn't be right for me not to try my hardest. I do it for my wife and kids, to show them that just because Dad is in a wheelchair doesn't mean he's any different from anyone else and can't do his best. Nobody knows when they might end up in a wheelchair and I want my kids to know that life must go on."

Perez sets the same example for other athletes. "These veterans are my family too," he said. "I try my hardest for them and want them to feel like I do, like a wheelchair athlete can be as well prepared and perform as competitively as anybody else. In July, he will join more than 500 fellow "family members" to compete in the 28th National Veterans Wheelchair Games in Omaha, Nebraska – his 10th straight year of competing at the event.

Although he turns the basketball court into his own personal playground, he also enjoys both track and softball. "I eat, drink and sleep basketball," he says. Perez has played for Puerto Rico in National Wheelchair Basketball Association events and competed in the Caribbean Wheelchair Games. "If I don't fall out of my chair at least once during a basketball game, I feel like I'm not trying my hardest," he laughed. "That's my trademark!"

A paraplegic, Perez was injured at age 19 while serving in the Army. He started competing in the National Veterans Wheelchair Games at 24, in 1999. "I got hooked on the competition and the people I met," he recalls.

The question now arises: What is Orlando Perez capable of doing? With the swiftness and focus of a tiger, he is destined to succeed as he continues to make his family proud of his achievements – in sports and in life.
